I am not the changer of things,
I am not just changed by things,
I am, the change, of all things.

No, I'm not an agent of change,
I am, the change, the movement itself,
The verb, the expression,
I am, the change, of all things.

Looking down is neither my purpose,
Nor my desire to rise up,
As long as I can see the widened sky,
My mind, heart, and soul, will always be floating and flowing from above.

Yes, being the change is radical for me,
Everything I touch, is changed and still changing.

However, yes,
The change can't entirely control his change and all his consequences,
The change still needs to have a place for rest.

Hence, the time to rest is as important as to work.
None of them shall be dominant at all times.
And the change, soon, may finally come to his end,
But the soul of the change shall never end to satisfy the Changer.
